

*It is the sacrilegious curiosity that has formed man's anxiety
form the depths of the ages that animated
them when they
desired their victims,
when in their victims'
open wounds they
hunted for what in the innocence Christine
would later, before the judge, call "the mystery of life"*
Jacques Lacan

It is the sacrilegious curiosity that has formed man's anxiety from the depths of the ages that animated them when they desired their victims, when in their victims' open wounds they hunted for what in the innocence Christine would later, before the judge, call "the mystery of life"

Jacques Lacan

Es la sacrílega curiosidad la que ha formado la angustia del ser humano desde la profundidad de los tiempos, la que les animó cuando desearon sus víctimas, cuando en las herida abiertas de sus víctimas perseguían lo que más tarde llamó Cristina frente al juez, "el misterio de la vida".